BASIC FUNCTIONS OF THE POSITION

The Cataloging and Selection Librarian in the Library of Congress Office, New Delhi performs two very diversified roles – that of a cataloging expert specializing in one or more language/subject areas (Marathi); and that of an acquisition and selection expert in the language/subject of assignment (Marathi). Performs the following duties, though not limited to those listed.

- Perform “independent original” descriptive cataloging of monographs, serials and non-book materials in accordance with international standards, viz., AACR2, Library of Congress Rule Interpretations and current revisions, and other cataloging manuals.
- Perform “independent original” subject cataloging of titles falling in the subject categories for which the Office has been declared independent in accordance with the LC rules for subject cataloging.
- Perform preliminary subject cataloging of titles falling in subject categories for which the office does not have final authority, or for titles selected for Enhanced Minimal Level cataloging (MLC+). Assigns existing subject headings to vernacular titles.
- Using the LC Classification and Shelf listing Manual, incumbent performs shelf listing for monographs acquired for Library of Congress’s collection that fall within the classes for which the New Delhi Office is responsible for sending “shelf ready” acquisitions to LOC Washington.
- Manage own time to ensure that selection, acquisition and cataloging duties are performed at levels of productivity consistent with the incoming workload.
- Select assigned South Asian vernacular language material (Marathi) in a variety of formats: monographs, serials, pamphlets, maps, ephemeral material and non-print media such as sound cassettes, CDs, DVD’s, etc.
- Search language publications against automated databases to eliminate duplicates, especially reprints and subsequent editions.
- Stay abreast of publishing, literary, socio-political and economic trends in the region(s), language(s), and/or subject(s) assigned.
- Evaluate adequacy of coverage provided by the office’s assigned vendors of publications for the language/subject of assignment.
- Respond to queries pertaining to acquisition of material from the Library of Congress and libraries participating in the South Asia Co operative Acquisitions Program.

A copy of the complete position description listing all duties and responsibilities is available in the Human Resources Office.
